Art Unit: 1774

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in–

(1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effect under this subsection of a national application published under section 122(b) only if the international application designating the United States was published under Article 21(2)(a) of such treaty in the English language; or

(2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that a patent shall not be deemed filed in the United States for the purposes of this subsection based on the filing of an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a).

2. Claims 1-12 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being clearly anticipated by Tokunaga et al. (6,403,162).

The reference discloses silica that may be fumed or precipitated, including silica sol, colloidal silica and silica gel. The silica has an average particle size of 50 nm or less, preferably less than 30 nm (see col. 1, line 61-63, col. 2, line 55 to col. 3, line 29). The silica is used in an ink jet recording layer including cationic polymers such as quaternary ammonium polymers that are inherently known in the art to be mordanting agents (see col. 5, lines 5-9). The reference discloses the inclusion of a polyvinyl alcohol binder (see col. 6, lines 60-65) and cross-linking agents including dihydroxydioxane (see col. 7, lines 21-39). Other binders may be present so that even though the hydrophilic binder is used in a ratio with cross-linking agent that is preferably .01 to 40%, the range with respect to the polyvinyl alcohol alone would go higher, including amounts over 50% (see col. 7, lines 3-8 and 42-45). Finally, the reference discloses supports of polyethylene-coated paper (see col. 8, lines 50-60).

3. Claims 1-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tokunaga et al. for reasons given in the rejection above and for reasons to follow. The reference does not specifically disclose the use of fumed alumina, but does disclose a preference for fumed silica over other silicas. Based upon this disclosure, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to utilize fumed alumina because both alumina and silica are conventional in the art and used as alternatives and because one of ordinary skill in the art would have expected fumed inorganic pigments to have the same or similar properties.
